

FIGURE 17.9. The chance of finding a genotype that brings together very many fit alleles (++++...) is vanishingly small (left curve). Natural selection works by increasing the frequency of alleles that are individually favorable. As each becomes more common, the chance of finding fit combinations increases (rightmost curves).