

FIGURE 24.18. (A) The active site of a protein (red) may be made up of several different segments of the primary sequence. Usually, however, it consists of a single stretch of sequence (B), which will tend to be conserved.